Victor Zucchi & Son Builds Dream Homes You'll Want to Stay In—Pandemic or Not

Bogota, NJ, November 10, 2020: As Governor Phil Murphy recently announced, New Jersey is experiencing a third Covid -19 wave. Although some venues are open and social distancing and mask wearing are becoming more normalized, the safest place to be is still your home. And according to Christopher Zucchi of Victor Zucchi & Son, who represents the fourth-generation of this well-known and much revered building contractor company within the New York Metropolitan area, the pandemic has caused homeowners to view their home environment differently.

“People are spending most of their time at home now—and noticing things,” Zucchi explains. “Maybe the kitchen doesn’t work for them anymore or there is simply not enough space for privacy or activities. So one of the things we are doing is problem solving to create more comfortable spaces that meet client needs that transforms their residence into the dream home they’ve always wanted.” Eighty-five years of accumulated artistry, craftsmanship, and skill—all with its roots in Italy—are the tools this family uses to create one-of-a-kind spaces and designs for each home.

As people decide to expand their homes or move during the pandemic, Zucchi & Son is busy throughout the area not only building dream homes and additions, but also doing the interior design and decorating—it’s all in the family and they do it all. The contractor takes Covid -19 precautions for themselves and their clients very seriously, exceeding recommended public health guidelines. That lines up with this building contractor’s reputation as exceeding expectations is not new to this company. “We attack every single project, large or small, on the owner’s behalf,” Zucchi says, “as if we were the construction managers, as if we were building for ourselves.” That kind of ethic and effort is consistently rewarded by word of mouth referrals from happy, satisfied clients.

But it is the joy of the final reveal, when the project is complete, that the Zucchi family really lives for and looks forward to. “We like to create a finished project with such a “Wow” factor that clients can’t miss it—even if they’ve seen the entire building process,” Zucchi says. “I love seeing the look on people’s faces and knowing we knocked their socks off.”

What drives this company? Pride in accomplishing such long-standing success through the unique artistry and the joy they bring to clients and their families. That joy can be yours, too.

Zucchi & Son is located at 129 E. Main Street in Bogota.
